

FINDINGS OF ROYAL COMMISSION ON OIL INDUSTRY

Clean Bill of Health For Petroleum Industry
No Need For Government Interference
Should Bring Free Flow of Capital Into The Province

By T. Windross

Edmonton, Alta. June 20.—The long expected, and costly in taxes to the people, findings of the royal commission on the oil industry has come to light at last. Comprising 528 type-written pages, the report of the McMillivray Royal Commission, which spent approximately two years examining closely into every phase of the oil industry in Alberta, was made available to the public Friday. It is dated April 17, 1940.

Great interest attaches to the report for two reasons. The first that the investigation was so long and so thorough—in fact it was a longer and more thorough investigation than has ever been made of the oil industry in Canada and probably no other country in Canada. The second point is that the commission had the benefit of the most expert evidence that has ever been available to any body. There was for instance Dr. J. W. Fry, pre-eminent among petroleum experts of the world, Dr. C. Granger Brown, who is reputed to be one of the world's outstanding authorities on oil refining, together with numerous eminent experts on production, transportation, etc., and a galaxy of experienced practical men who were examined closely on every phase of operations.

In the light of these circumstances, great weight will undoubtedly be given to the report, and if the government so desires it can use it as an instrument whereby the industry can be left free to develop for the benefit of the province and the consumers of petroleum. The report finds that the petroleum industry in Alberta is efficient, that it is free from any policies or practices adverse to the public interest, and it recommends emphatically against any government interference by the exercise of mandatory powers.

The price paid for petroleum at the well in Turner Valley which has been the subject of considerable discussion is found to be a fair price which is not fixed whimsically or arbitrarily but by the influence of conditions in the world's oil markets. The report recommends that the 5¢ one-half cent per barrel reduction in the pipe line rate from Turner Valley to Calgary and the two and one-half cents reduction in loading charges, which were enforced by the Public Utilities Commission last July on the recommendation of the McMillivray royal commission in its report on the oil industry should go to the producer in Turner Valley. This would bring the price from $12.50 to $12.00, or $12.50 per barrel and on the 1939 volume of production would mean an increased revenue for producers of $600,000 which would be paid in full to the producers for the purpose of incentive to further development of the industry and further the search for oil in Alberta.

The commission considers there is no likelihood of construction of a pipeline from Alberta to the Great Lakes until after the war. The report also finds that the only real hope of the material extension of the Turner Valley market lies in reduced transportation rates out of refineries in Saskatchewan which use Turner Valley oil to points in Manitoba.

In determining whether prices of petroleum products to the consumer in Alberta are fair and reasonable, the commission took the operation of the largest companies operating in the province and it found that it is not possible to determine the cost of producing any one product of petroleum any more than it is possible to determine the exact cost of the production of any other attractive industry. It found, however, that the competition between refiners is real and is a safeguard against unreasonable prices. The report also states that the return on capital earned by such companies as the Imperial Oil in 1938 was not so high as to indicate the need for reduction in tank car prices.

In view of the long investigation and the duplication of retail service stations and wholesale bulk terminals, the opinion prevailing in some sections that these add to the cost of petroleum products, the conclusion of the commission is that this is not the case. It is a fact that the report says: "We are content to say that those who are alarmed at what would seem to be uneconomic marketing practices would probably be the first to deplore the lack of service and convenience, and would desire the freeing of competition by rigidity of control." The commission finds that only a small fraction of a cent would possibly be saved by elimination of bulk stations, and this saving would be at the danger of supplies being inadequate in rural areas.

With regard to retail service stations, the commission reports that the expense incurred in this connection is negligible when examined in the light of all marketing costs and that the prices charged by the wholesaler cannot be sold to be materially affected by service station duplication. It recommends against any procedure to try to limit or reduce the number of stations through government intervention on the ground that it would not be practicable and that if done arbitrarily it would tend toward forcing loss and monopoly.

Considerable space is given to expression of the commission's views against any mandatory control or interference with the industry. The report says: "We repeat for the sake of clarity and emphasis, that which we have before said, that no case has been made out for government intervention in Alberta in any branch of the petroleum industry."

One revelation as to how the price of gasoline might be reduced to the consumer is set forth in the report. It is that the gasoline tax could be reduced.

The report is in fact and effect a clean bill of health for the petroleum industry in Alberta and provided the government will be guided by its findings, a free flow of capital into the province for the development of its resources, which would benefit all classes of the community, may reasonably be expected.

St. Michael's Church And Rectory Improved

The cost of stucco which has been applied to St. Michael's and All Angels' Church and fresh coat of red paint on the roof has greatly improved the appearance of this quaint and attractive church.

At the same time the rectory has received much interior improvement, making it a very attractive and comfortable residence.

HAROLD FREEMAN WRITES THE STANDARD

Camp 1810, June 12th

Manitoba.

Dear Mrs. Moore,

Thanks a lot for the copies of "The Standard." I am getting them regularly and certainly appreciate it. I've nothing like keeping in touch with things at home and we certainly look forward to the mail call every day. We have a mail call at 1 o'clock every day and it is issued to the men by the orderly sergeant.

We have several of the Strathmore fellows here including Ronnie Hinch, wife, Frank Seales, Jack Davies, Harry Leigh, myself and I believe one of the Saddle boys, although I haven't seen him yet. The boys in the Engineers are at Dundas, Sask.

We are all under canvas here. There are four men to each tent and we certainly have variety in the one I'm in. One man is from New Brunswick, one from B. C., one from Calgary, and myself. It is a very pretty sight to see the hundreds of tents in long straight rows which quarter the troops stationed here.

We haven't had any word of leaving yet. I understand the majority of the troops will be leaving very shortly.

Thanking you again, I am,

Yours sincerely,

Harold Freeman

LETTER FROM DOUG HIRTLE

England, May 28th, 1940

Dear Mother,

Well we're still here, and now it looks like we may be for a while yet, although we've thought we were away several times already.

I got your parcel, also Pop's and Mrs. Martin's. Most of the fellows in the band got parcels lately, so we had a real feed here tonight. Cec, Ernie and I ate the nibbles after heating them over at the coy. field kitchen. I was tasted good to have corn again with toast and peanut butter, but I missed having choc. cookies with it. However Cec had a stack of other kinds of cookies, so we did O. K. The hot choc. works swell and is very handy, there is lots of it for last for a long time too.

Yesterday we really packed up, cramming everything into the bags I left Calgary with, except the little suit case, which is at Fuller's for the duration. We took our instruments and bag to the G. M. stores for moving. I thought sure we were going, some where but last night it was all called off, so I got my trumpet out again.

Jack surprised me yesterday when I was going to visit my new regiment marked on it. There are rumors that the unit may be changed slightly and a different place in the country. I don't know how I will stay about the same as it is now, and it will still be A. S. C. It comes about, I imagine, the units in Calgary awaiting the report of medical examinations.

I was going to wait till pay day to write this, due to lack of stamps and money, but I lay on my bed today and slumped dropped out of my pocket. Lord knows how long I can buy a couple of stamps. We thought pay day would be today, but I guess it's not till Thursday.

Most of the motorcycleists have been on furlough this week, and did not get their bikes maintained, so they put two or three (who were free) on doing it for the whole works, consequently I have been greasing, oiling and tightening nuts and bolts for two days. It's all done now pretty well.

The war looks pretty serious for us too. I don't know what the papers will help say, King Leopold backing down the way he did. I often wonder Heine of Strathmore, and Edward Meese of Calgary, took place. Rev. Leslie Pearson presided.

The bride chose for the occasion a pretty afternoon gown in blue with blue and white accessories. She wore a large white veil and carried a bouquet of cream roses and ferns.

Mr. Art Hay, Calgary Stampede and Exhibition Jury's 8 to 10. Even as I mentioned this, Banks came in, saw it and the end Ernie are talking about the Stampede and pointing to the direct attractions on the sign.

I had to burn this paper off Cec, as mine is packed in my kit bag down in the Q. M. S. I guess I ought to get out tomorrow.

Give Ernie my love when you see her. Goodbye for now.

Love Doug.

Following the ceremony, the wedding party retired to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hay where a reception was held. The bride and groom were seated at the head of the table.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

(By H. G. L. Strauge)
Director — The Crop Testing Plan

Italy's invasion and occupation of several countries has deprived Canada and other wheat exporting areas of valuable wheat markets. Some people, however, have jumped to the conclusion, because of this, that apart from Great Britain Canada has hardly any wheat markets now left.

A study of the Board of Grain Commissioners' official report for the last crop year, however, reveals that Canada exported approximately 160 million bushels of wheat to forty-nine different countries of the world. By the action of Germany, Canada has not lost the wheat and flour markets of six of these countries, which six last year took between them just over 21 million bushels of Canadian wheat, but Canada still retains the markets of 42 different countries, in addition to Great Britain and Ireland, and these 42 countries last year took from Canada a total of thirty-seven million bushels of wheat.

There are, I believe, good reasons, too, for expecting that these 12 markets, and Great Britain herself, will take, during this coming year, considerably more wheat and flour from us than they did last year. It can be said, therefore, that Canada has many overseas wheat markets still available to her.

Ottawa, June 20 — The past week has been a testing and anxious time for Canada, but it has also been a time in which Canadians have tested their resolution for tasks and trials ahead. As partner in the community of free nations allied in the struggle for freedom, this country has had to bear the impact of the news of Italy joining Germany in the field and has watched with deep concern and with sympathetic pride in the French army the course of the gigantic struggle in Northern France. The news of the reverses to allied arms and of the evacuation of Paris has brought sorrow and a very natural anxiety here in Ottawa, but it has also inspired added determination and has not dimmed the belief that whatever trials have to be borne, the allied cause will triumph in the end. It is a solemn, grim and determined parliament that is carrying on its work in Ottawa these days. Slight differences have only faint echoes in parliament, and where political feelings are shown the object is to speed the action to still greater efforts in the prosecution of the war. To observers it is quite evident that parliament in the hour of crises has a single mind and a single goal.

The appointment of Hon. J. L. Ralston as minister of national defence has met with general approval. He held this portfolio from 1926 to 1929, and in the present administration has been minister of finance, a difficult post, to the Capital. Both as minister of the Crown and personally, he held a high place in the regard and affection of all circles in the Capital. The military general, which followed a service about his career in the parliamentary buildings, was a fitting and impressive tribute to the modest, hard-working and efficient minister who had been a private in the ranks in the last war and who held the highest military post in the service of his country in this world conflict. His ashes were buried in Beechwood cemetery at Ottawa on the funeral day. The Prime Minister read the last words written by Mr. Rogers, which were found in his desk. "In the faith we will fight on, we will resist, we will endure, we will take the offensive and we will win."

The question of consolidating the home front has been occupying the attention of parliament. Since Italy entered the war, the problem of internal security has become more acute. It has been explained by the minister of justice, Mr. Ernest Lapointe that since Italy's declaration of war, several hundred restrictions have been gathered in the net of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The list covered by the order for enforcement had been already prepared by the Mounted Police, and the Minister paid a quiet tribute to the efficiency of that body of police who are looking after internal security in this country and whose reputation is unexcelled by any police organization in the world. The Prime Minister said the people of Canada "to remain calm, steady and not lose realization $2.50. Arrangements in connection with the Conference at Cluny were completed and some of the work to be done in the handicraft exhibit was on view. The hostess served a delicious lunch at the close of the meeting.

PASSPORTS FOR U. S. A. TRAVEL

In view of the recent United States ruling that all Canadians visiting that country after July 1st, will require passports and visas before entering the department of external affairs at Ottawa has prepared for a great increase in demand for passports.

To secure a passport, a completed form, properly certified and accompanied by photographs, is submitted to the government passport bureau with a $5 fee, and it normally requires two or three days for the application to be passed and a passport issued.

Next step is for the applicant to obtain a visa from the nearest U. S. consular office.

Canadian passports are valid for five years, when they may be renewed for an additional five years upon payment of a renewal fee of $2.

get unduly perturbed by all sorts of rumors which are circulated. Spreading wild rumors hampers the work of the police. The R. C. M. P. had reported to the Minister that they were swamped by a flood of complaints of subversive activities. Many of these were based "on second hand gossip."

The defence of Canada regulations. Mr. Lapointe stated in the House, might restrict certain liberties. Those who were doing the fighting overseas had accepted, since, great restraints. Surely, he urged, those who are not taking an active part in the war should accept the regulations necessary for the safety of the state.

The resolution introduced by Mr. MacKenzie King, which appointed a committee of fifteen members to review the defence of Canada regulations, was passed by the House without a vote.

Acting on a suggestion from Mr. Stagh member for Perry Sound, Ontario, the minister of justice added an amendment to the resolution which would instruct the committee to consider the question of punishment for those convicted of subversive acts. Mr. Stagh had said he considered the death penalty should be placed on the statute as the punishment of those convicted of acts of espionage and sabotage and subversive activities which "reeked of treachery."

A program of construction for the Commonwealth Air Training plan which will cost $52,000,000 is under way. Hon. C. G. Power, minister for air has told the commons. Every effort humanly possible will be exerted towards the acceleration of this program," he told the House and cheers, and he warned that no one whether a member of parliament or not would receive any special consideration. "Our partners in the plan, who are our Allies," said Mr. Power, "realize the significance and urgency that he behind the purpose of this program. In full sympathy with that purpose the people of Canada call for action and results. So do we. In the words of Herbert Morrison of England, 'Let's go for it.' The program outlined should be completed this summer, the minister said.

The exhortation of the minister for air did not fall on deaf ears. All members of the House applauded. With the French prime minister, M. Reynaud, making his poignant appeal to the United States for "clouds" of aircraft, with the R. A. F. harrying the

MY TOWN

"MY TOWN is a place where my home is situated; where my vote is cast; where my children are educated; where my life is chiefly lived. It is the home spot for me. My town has a right to my civic loyalty. It supports me. I must support it. My town wants my citizenship, not partisanship; friendliness, not enmity; cooperation, not dissension; sympathy, not criticism; my intelligent support, not indifference. My town supplies me with law and order, trade, friends, education, morals, recreation and the rights of a freeman citizen. I should believe in my town and work for it. Strathmore citizens have a just pride in their town. It is one of the best of small towns."

EXAMINATIONS — TESTING TIME

EXAMINATIONS in the schools throughout Alberta are in the final line of effort and thought, for pupils in grades IX and XII this week and next. It is a time of testing and in general, gives evidence of the faithfulness of application to work and study during the preceding year.

In January it is so easy and alluring to put aside work for play. In June we hope there will be no need for vain regrets.

For some students June brings a new experience of interruption of friendships. For some final examinations mean going out into the world to take on the more serious responsibilities of a life for which school has been intended as a preparation. It is a time filled with mixed emotions and mixed resolves from which we believe the majority of students will prove true to the "tomorrow" standard.

CANADA PREPARES URGENT DEFENSE MEANS

The bill introduced in the House Tuesday shows the recognition by the members of the Chamber of Commerce in which Canada and the United States stand should Hitler's ruthless aggression not soon be checked.

It is a momentous condition. The world when peoples whose greatest desire is to live in peace with the world at large — and whose greatest ambition is to develop their splendid country on a progressive upward trend that these things should be put in second place — and that we must arm to the teeth and turn our progress into a military machine in order to ward off the threats of the enemy to preserve the peace of our land.

We repeat it is a momentous condition, and no one regrets this more than Prime Minister King, but iron must be met with iron, and plane with plane, and tank with tank, hence Canada has taken the stand which was proclaimed in Ottawa Tuesday. Then in the words of the late Mr. Rogers: "In faith we will fight on, we will resist, we will endure, we will take the offensive, and we will win."

PARLIAMENTARY NOTES.

by DR. GERSHAW, M.P.

Old Members of the House of Commons say that June the tenth will stand out as the most tragic day they ever lived through.

There was first the news of Italy's entrance into the War with all that it means in increasing the burden of the Allied Powers. Then there was the formal declaration of Canada's war on Italy. This measure passed through both Houses quickly and was called to the King for declaration.

Then came the shocking news of the death in an airplane crash of the Hon. Norman Rogers and his three gallant flying companions. This brought tears to the eyes and a sadness to the hearts of many as it seemed such a personal loss. The news spread rapidly through the building and every one seemed stunned and the sorrows of men who had lost a close friend was evident on many faces.

I left my room just after the news must have arrived and, in going through the various halls, no fewer than three people asked if I had heard the news.

The House and galleries rapidly filled when the bells were sounded.

Very well, I will carry on. These were the last words of Mr. Rogers to the Prime Minister, who spoke under the obvious stress of great emotion when addressing the House of the tragedy. There had been some question, as to whether Mr. Rogers should make the Toronto trip, or not, on account of the serious turn the War had taken. Mr. King suggested that if he did not go it might be thought that things were even more critical than they were actually. The above quotation were the last words in reply.

The late Mr. Rogers had been much interested in the Medicine Hat Dist. He was particularly in the ranching life. It seems only a short time ago since he and Mrs. Rogers stopped there for breakfast with us and I recall at that time the feeling that he was one whom all men would instinctively trust.

On Tuesday with three other Alberta Members, I had an interview with the Chief of the Advisory Council to the Department of Munitions and Supply. Their big trouble has been that until a few days ago they could hardly get British Orders and now there were too many orders. He gave us very definite assurance that when all shell orders were required that the Plants in our district would not be overlooked. We stated the needs of our district and I stressed the need for a number of shells that were made in Medicine Hat in the last War. Mr. Woodward had full particulars of our plants and gave us every assurance that no new factories would be built to do work that could be done by factories now built. He paid a tribute to the splendid cooperation of the Factory Association and mentioned that he hoped to have a small Advisory Committee of 12 or 15 people in each province to assist contracts.

Speed: "That's Popofski, the medium. He believes in spirit return."

Norm Taylor: "So do I... I voted for it."

I didn't raise my check to be a convict.

"Do you know her or is she a nice girl?"

Tizzy: "Do you think that long skirts will ever go out?"

Lolly: "Not with me."

LOGIC: If beer mugs, why shouldn't I.

There are two ways of keeping out of divorce court. One to give your wife an unlimited checking account in any or all of the stores on Fifth Avenue, and the other is to stay single.

Once more the appeal for supplies for the Red Cross is urgent and the group leaders will appreciate hearing from ladies in their district willing to sew or knit. An appeal is also being made for blankets for the millions of refugees. To date the Carseland Red Cross has raised the sum of $321.25.

Finished 350 articles of sewing and 72 pairs of seamen and army socks and 25 sleeveless sweaters. At present plans are being made to hold a Red Cross dance in the near future.
